Travel + Leisure loves JetBlue's Mint Studio

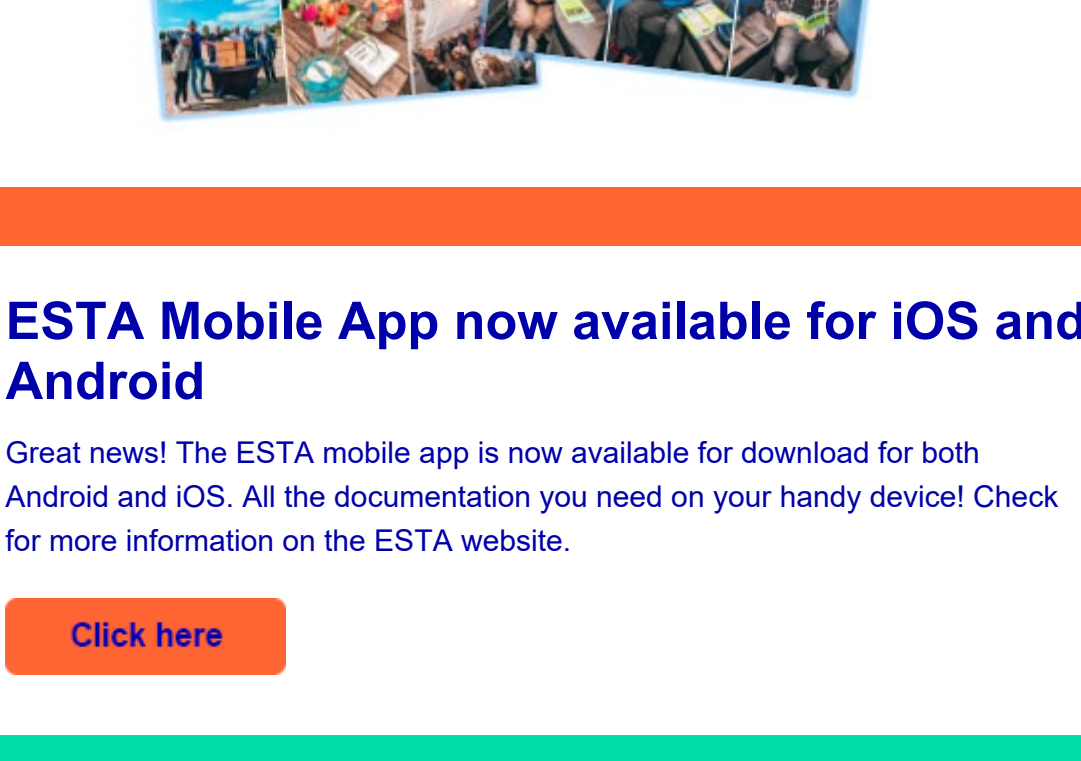

Travel + Leisure recently compiled a list of the best business class seats available, and great news: JetBlue is one of only six airlines that made the cut! JetBlue's Mint Studio is listed alongside Qatar's A350 Qsuite, All Nippon Airways' 777-300ER "The Room," Singapore Airlines' A350-900ULR Business Class, Delta One's A350 Suites and Emirates' A380 Business Class.

The only American-based product to give Delta One Suites a run for its money is Mint Studio, which JetBlue unveiled in late 2021. These closed-door pods are remarkably spacious, especially when you consider that they're built into an Airbus 321, which isn't even a wide-body jet. At 45 inches across, the bed is literally large enough for you to toss and turn in as you sleep. An adjoining bench allows you to invite a guest from another pod to socialize with while you fly. There's also plenty of attention to detail woven throughout, such as a wireless charging pad within arms reach and an adjustable TV screen so that you can view it clearly while fully reclined. Food and drink options are assembled by trendy New York City bars and restaurants.
