

JetBlue and United Complete DOT Review of Blue Sky Collaboration

JetBlue and United announced they have completed the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) review of their Blue Sky collaboration and are able to proceed to implementation with more details to come in the coming weeks.

Blue Sky is a new and unique collaboration designed to give customers of both airlines even more options to find flights that fit their plans as well as new opportunities to earn and use MileagePlus® miles and TrueBlue points across both airlines.

Blue Sky will begin introducing new customer benefits starting this fall, rolling out in phases.

Special Meals on the Transatlantic Routes

Special Meals in Core cabin

Core meals are customizable and all vegetarian type meals/vegan, gluten-free, and low-calorie options will be offered onboard. Therefore, Core cabin special meals are limited to Kosher, Hindu, and Muslim meals only and must be ordered at least 24 hours in advance. If you attempt to add VGML, GFML, LCML, or SPML to/from London/Europe for Core cabin bookings, you will get error respond UN or NO. This does not mean no meal service for your client – it just means we already got you covered!

Special Meals in Mint cabin

When travelling in Mint on the Transatlantic route, customers can request the following special meals: Kosher, Hindu, Muslim, Gluten free, Vegetarian, Low Calorie and SPML ('Plane Meal', simpler menu suitable for children).
